HISTORY OF NATIONAL WHEELCHAIR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

There were no organized wheelchair sports prior to World War II although many hardy individuals with disabilities may have done many things, individually, over the years.

Veterans of all nations returning home after World War II commanding a great deal of respect because of the sacrifices they had made, their maturity, their numbers and their common bonds. They were not to be ignored nor overlooked.

Wheelchair sports had its initial beginning in certain veteran's administration hospitals throughout the United States (Birmingham; California; Richmond, Virginia; Staten Island, New York; Framingham, Massachusetts; Memphis, Tennessee; Chicago, Illinois; and the Bronx, New York) where energetic veterans began shooting baskets, among other things, and eventually formed teams. As they played, they adapted some of the rules and regulations of regular basketball to their own specific needs. As more joined into the new wheelchair sport several wheelchair basketball teams were officially organized. This effort led to the first organized wheelchair sport in history.

Concurrently, pioneers in rehabilitation came to recognize that sports and recreation could be an important aid in rehabilitating disabled veterans and all other individuals with disabilities and should become an integral part of rehabilitation.

In 1948, on the front lawn of the Spinal Injury Centre, Stoke-Mandeville, England, Dr. Ludwig Guttman introduced Europe's first organized wheelchair sports program in which twenty-six paralyzed British veterans shot archery in an unhurried way. Dr. Guttman soon was instrumental in adding lawn bowling, table tennis, shot-put, javelin, the club throw, fencing, snooker, weightlifting, swimming, net ball, and eventually basketball as it is internationally known.

Competition in the Stoke-Mandeville Games was originally for complete and incomplete paraplegics. Later, many classifications were employed for the participants according to the extent of their disabilities of the level and completeness of their paralysis. Today the classification system has been highly refined and standardized with a board of specialists certifying the athletes' classifications.

In 1952, Dr. Guttman invited a team of wheelchair athletes from the Netherlands to compete with the British team at Stoke-Mandeville. This was the first international wheelchair sports competition. From then on wheelchair sports have enjoyed unbelievable growth.

In 1957, Ben Lipton, Director of the Bulova School of Watchmaking, pioneered or led the way in establishing the first National Wheelchair Games in the United States in cooperation with the Paralyzed Veterans of America and Adelphi College (now Adelphi University) of New York. From 1958 through 1973, the Games were held annually at Bulova Park in Long Island, New York. In 1974, the 18th National Wheelchair Games traveled west to Cheney, Washington under the sponsorship of Eastern Washington State College and the 19th National Wheelchair Games were hosted by the University of Illinois under the sponsorship of the Division of Rehabilitation Education Services and Delta Sigma Omicron, rehabilitation service fraternity, marking the first time the Games were held in the Midwest.

The National Wheelchair Games were patterned after the Stoke-Mandeville Games but added many new events such as the 60, 100 and 220 yard dashes; the 220 and 400 shuttle relays; and, in subsequent years, introduced the discus and the slalom, an intricate obstacle course in which competitors race against time. Each year the National Wheelchair Games experiment with additional new events which parallel regular sports competition for men and women.

In 1958 the National Wheelchair Games Committee structured and organized the National Wheelchair Athletic Association. Its purposes were to establish rules and regulations governing all wheelchair sports in the United States except wheelchair basketball which already had its own national association and rules.

As the U.S. National Wheelchair Games increased in scope and magnitude, it seemed appropriate that the United States enter into international competition. In 1960, the first representative U.S. wheelchair athletic team was selected from the winners of the National Wheelchair Games and, under the direction of Ben Lipton, entered the International Stoke-Mandeville Games.

Finances for the American team's trip were realized through the efforts of Mr. Lipton and other interested individuals, organizations, teams and by the participants themselves. As a direct result of this, Mr. Lipton led in the incorporation of the United States Wheelchair Sports Fund which has as its primary purpose the financial sponsorship of United States wheelchair athletic teams in international competitions. The United States has participated in International Games every year since 1960.

1960 has also marked the first time the International Wheelchair Games were held in conjunction with the regular Olympic Games. Immediately following the 1969 Olympics, Rome, Italy played host to wheelchair athletes from all over the globe. In 1964, the Paralympics, as they are called each Olympic year and the International Stoke-Mandeville Games every other year, were held in Tokyo, Japan immediately following the regular Olympics, with twenty-three nations joining in the competition. In 1968, they were hosted in Tel Aviv, Israel, and in 1972, in Heidelberg, Germany. The 1976 Paralympics were held in Toronto, Canada.

International competition has flourished in the western hemisphere with the first Pan-American Wheelchair Games being held in Winnipeg, Canada, in 1967. United States teams have also competed in the Pan-American Games in Buenos Aires, Argentina in 1969; Kingston, Jamaica in 1971; and Mexico City, Mexico in 1975, the Games being held biannually.

The growth of the National Wheelchair Athletic Association has been continuous. Over 500 new competitors have joined the Association in the last five months bringing the total membership to over 2,500 including coaches, officials, and affiliates. This spring 14 regional meets were held for all competitors who hope to qualify for the 20th National Wheelchair Games.

The National Games determine national championships in the various events and serve as trials for the U.S. Wheelchair Athletic Team that will represent our country in international competitions that particular year. In 1975 the U.S. Team participated in the 23rd International Stoke-Mandeville Games in Stoke-Mandeville, England from July 20-26; and the 5th Pan American Wheelchair Games, Mexico City, Mexico August 8-15, 1975.

The Wheelchair Sports Associations are constantly looking for new people to participate in basketball, track and field events, bowling, swimming and other activities. A person need not be confined to a wheelchair, however, to participate in wheelchair sports. If, because of a leg disability of paralysis in the lower extremities, a person is not able to take part in regular sports, he or she can take part in wheelchair activities. Wheelchair sporting events are not confined to the Indianapolis area. Members of the varsity squads have opportunities to travel, not only throughout the United States, but the world as well.
